TO MAKE A FLYLESS CITY

Cleveland is to be classed and catalogued as a flyless town. In the campaign inaugurated for the extermination of the fly four steps are outlined:

First.—To educate the people as to the deadly nature of the fly.

Second.—To kill off all winter flies—those hidden about the houses, waiting their season of forage.

Third.—To do away with all breeding places for flies.

Fourth.—To trap all flies that happen to escape.

As the first step addresses on the subject are being made before the various women's clubs and in the schools of the city. Circulars and booklets will be distributed among the children of the schools, to be carried by them to their homes; posters and illustrated bulletins will be placed in the schools, in the street cars and other public places, carrying the sermon of the fly reform.

The extermination of the winter fly is a problem for the individual housekeeper. Don't let one fly escape you. Hunt for them and kill them, for the winter fly is the most dangerous of the race. The winter fly is the mother of all next summer's terrible throng.

To do away with the fly breeding places is merely a matter of cleanliness, for the fly is a scavenger, a lover of filth and an habitual follower after all that is unclean and unwholesome. Clean houses, gardens and yards, clean streets and alleyways discourage the fly in its breeding proclivities, and therefore the doctrine of cleanliness is to be preached by the anti-fly crusaders, along with the sermons on the deadly character of the insect.

And carrying out the fourth step all the house furnishing stores in the city will be asked to carry in stock and push the sale of fly traps, marvelous little wire screen houses to be baited with milk, wherein a fly once entrapped is doomed. With the campaign of education will be given complete instructions for the use of the fly trap, which may be placed on porches or window sills, on garbage pails—anywhere that flies are likely to congregate, but always on the outside of the house—always outside. Catch the fly outside of the house before it has a chance to come in and spread its poison and disease.

This city is to be divided into districts and each district divided again into clans and clubs, and from each center, small or large, branches will reach out, grappling with the subject in whatever way seems best adapted to that individual section.

Death to the fly is to be the battle cry. It is to be a fight of man against his enemy the fly and of the fly against man.

—Cleveland Leader.

OWSLEY COUNTY

Cow Creek, July 12.—Samuel Wilson, Sr., was at Booneville last

"As one whom his mother comforteth."—Isaiah LXVI, 13.

A book unheeded in her lap, she sits with dreaming eyes
And looks from out the window at the distant hills that rise—
Yet soon she crosses all the hills and finds a pathway straight
To where the children clamber on the fence beside the gate:
To where the children hail her with their shouts of wondrous glee,
Yet still the book, unheeded, lies half-open on her knee.

And far from out the window bends the sky in hazy blue,
And she fares forth upon a road that leads the meadows through,
That hurries down the city streets until she finds a door
Which opens to her gentle knock; and then, as oft of yore,
She hears the laughter of her boy, she sorrows when he grieves.
Yet still the book is lying with her hand between the leaves.

And now she goes another way, where mountains touch the sky;
She threads the forest fastnesses until she draws a sigh
The little cottage where her girl has helped to make a home,
Where, in the distance on the sea, are gleams of upflung foam,
And for a while they speak of all the joys that used to be—
Yet still the book, unheeded, lies half-open on her knee.

And so she fares till sunset, she goes far and far away,
But always finds her haven at the ending of the day;
And takes her book and idly at the opened pages peers
With eyes that have the softness that is caused by unshed tears,
And sometimes she will murmur low, and sometimes she will smile,
For out and over all the land her heart has been the while.
